Justin Arnold, Planning, said on Aug 25, 2023, the Laramie County Chief Building Official visited the Laramie County Fire Authority facility and tested the viability of exempting compliance with National Fire Protection Association (NFPA) 286 for residential accessory structures. He said the code requirement stipulates that all spray foam insulation be coated with a fire barrier. Arnold said staff built three preconstructed wall sections, one with no spray foam insulation, one with insulation, and one with the currently required thermal barrier. He said that based upon those test results, it was determined that both Building and Fire officials believe it is safe to exempt accessory structures only from the NFPA 286.

Arnold said due to this finding, it is proposed that an amendment be made to the 2024 IRC Section R303.5.10 - Interior Finish: Residential detached accessory buildings (without habitable living space) are exempt from meeting the requirements of R306.6 as it relates to closed-cell spray foam insulation.
